☐

1. On 13 January and 8 February 1954, source determined that the quartering buildings at Schoenwalde airfield, formerly occupied by the unit equipped with twin-engine aircraft, were still vacant and boarded up. No Soviet soldiers wearing air force epaulets or air force insignia were seen at the field. No aircraft were parked on the landing field or in front of the closed hangars nor was air activity conducted at the field.

☐

2. On 14 March, no aircraft were observed at the field. The radio truck with rod antenna which had formerly been located at the field was removed, while the radio truck with a 7-sectional antenna was still there.

Comment: The quartering buildings at Schoenwalde airfield are occupied by units of the 31st AAA Div of the Soviet Army. The previously observed air force guard detail has apparently left the field. The radio truck with a 7-sectional antenna is a Rus-2 type set.
